

AUGMENTATIVE COMMUNICATION DEVICES FOR ICF/MR RESIDENTS

This fact sheet provides an overview of your right to get an augmentative communication device (speech generating device) if you are in an ICF/MR, or intermediate care facility for persons with intellectual disabilities.

Do I have the right to get an augmentative communication device?

Yes. Because the facility for persons with intellectual disabilities, or ICF/MR, participates in Medical Assistance (Medicaid), you have the right to get an augmentative communication device as a part of your active treatment. Active treatment includes services to help you function with self-determination and independence. Active treatment must preserve your abilities. Active treatment includes an assessment within 30 days of your going into the facility. Each assessment must include:

- your strengths and weaknesses
- what you need regardless of whether it is actually available
- your speech and language development
- the skills you need to live in the community

The facility's treatment team must decide what you need based upon your assessment. You, your parent (if you are a minor), or your legal guardian (if you have one) must be a part of the treatment team. The treatment team must write an individual plan for you within 30 days of your admission to the facility. The facility must follow the plan. The treatment team must review your plan at least every year. Your plan can be changed by the treatment team during the year. You can ask for a copy of your plan at any time.

The facility must provide an evaluation for an augmentative communication device as well as the recommended device when the treatment team decides that you need a device. The evaluation, the device, training, and maintenance and repair of the device should be written into your plan. You should be able to use your device in all places.

At any time, you can ask the treatment team to consider an evaluation for an augmentative communication device and that the recommended device be provided to you. Your friend, family member, or advocate can go to any treatment team meeting with you. You can ask that the evaluation, device, training for you and the staff, and maintenance and repair of the device be added to your plan. You may want to put your request to the treatment team in a written letter. Keep a copy of the letter for yourself.

Who pays for the augmentative communication device?

Because the facility participates in Medical Assistance, then it must pay for necessary equipment for your active treatment, including the evaluation for an augmentative communication device and the device itself.

Can I keep the augmentative communication device?

You can ask the Department of Human Services to let you keep your augmentative communication device if you leave the facility.
